ARCADIA

The heart of providing and managing access?

- online
- free of cost
- standardised metadata
- single search portal for federated archives
- till now, access has largely been seen as
 - online resource discovery via standardised metadata
 - simple identity-driven access control

Language documentation

- creation, annotation, preservation, and dissemination of a representative and multipurpose record of a language with emphasis on natural language usage in social contexts

cf Woodbury 2010, Himmelmann 2006

Stakeholders in language documentation

documenters

documentation projects

language consultants

communities

What is here?

heritage

curiosity journals applied

research

users

Characteristics of language documentation

- diversity – projects have different goals, methods, contexts, languages, cultures, communities, individuals
- protocol – recordings and analysis of language usage in often sensitive contexts
 - more people, more genres, more private conversations, less researcher knowledge

What is a digital EL documentation archive?

- more than a data repository
- fulfilling key needs of endangered languages stakeholders:
 - diversity
 - protocol
- a forum/platform for building and conducting of relationships between data providers and users
- level the playing field between researchers and community members

ELAR - architecture

ELAR's access system

- using URCS system
- system matches a resource's URCS value with the URCS rights of a given user
- interface always shows resource and user protocol
- URCS applies at deposit, bundle or file level
- depositors can manage access control and levels

U R C S	- all registered users can access.
U R C S	- researchers and community members are allowed access
U R C S	- only community members are allowed access
U R C S	- only subscribers are allowed access (requires application to depositor)

Title Documentation of endangered languages

Description

Approximately 6500 languages are currently spoken world-wide. It can be assumed that about two-thirds of these languages will become extinct in the 21st century. All languages are intimately interlinked with the culture of their speakers, and all languages and cultures represent specific expressions of human thought and social organisation. Therefore, with every language which becomes extinct priceless intellectual values will be lost forever. The project DOBES will contribute to the conservation of this cultural heritage. The MPI for Psycholinguistics in Nijmegen (NL) will house the data archive which will cover

Preservation of the Jewish Iraqi spoken language

Language: Jewish Iraqi

Depositor: Eli Timan

Location: Iraq

Summary of deposit
This deposit contains personal stories, songs and descriptions of life in Iraq in the first half of the twentieth century, as told by Jewish Iraqi informants in London, Canada and Israel in 2007.

The image on the right is a painting by Eli Sawdayee, showing a man and his donkey with the Alembic, distilling rose water. To access the story and picture, search for or click on alembic in the left panel.

Deposit contents
The stories, songs and descriptions have been transcribed and translated to English, time-aligned with the audio recordings, using ELAN software. There are also original paintings on which some of the stories are based.

Special Characteristics
Contains original paintings by informants, which are the focus of discussions.

What counts as access?

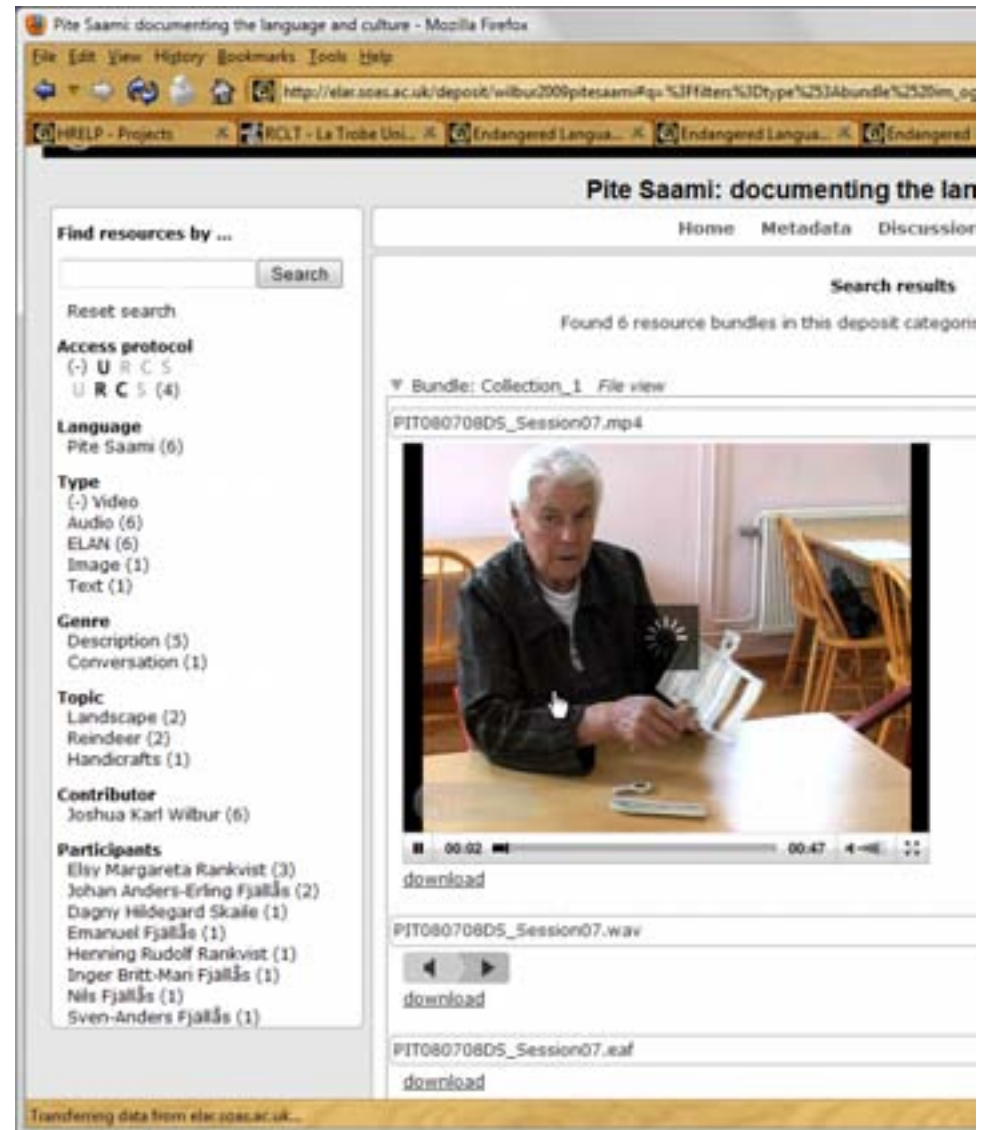

Access to what?

- different stakeholders want different things
 - eg descriptivists/typologists want standardised, technically encoded, linguistic system-markup
 - community members may want personally or culturally relevant items

What is access?

- play file(s)?
- download file?
- make content accessible to user?

Access is also about perceptions

- perceptions of interfaces – like Facebook, ELAR “reduces distance and power disparities, supports interactions”
- difficult access mistaken for access control
- personal appearance on website is overwhelming (NW coastal case)

Responses and conclusion

- URCS positively received
- subscription requests - all agreed by depositors
- terms and conditions, onerous but accepted!
- feedback about signup process, too “academic”
- access only for registered users?
- access as access-to-upload, cf Chinese case

The next big challenge ...

“ The next big challenge facing language documentation is the discovery and widespread use of software interfaces that make aesthetically appealing documentation materials that can be easily and flexibly used by a wide range of users, including the speech communities whose endangered languages we want to document.”

in Language Documentation and Conservation, v4
