The Aga Khan, head of the Ismaili Moslems, being weighed in diamonds on his Diamond Jubilee at Bombay recently. The gems are in plastic boxes on the scales.

HOMEWARD BOUND FROM MARKET

Women of Southern India hurry home from market with their morning's shopping. India is much in the news today because of her immediate problem of food scarcity and of the efforts being made to establish a form of self-government acceptable to all her people.

In a Far Eastern Dock

Old methods and new meet in this scene on a quay at Keelung. Steel cable for the coal mines of Formosa has been shipped there by Unrra, and the native dock-labourers are loading one of the great reels on to a lorry by means of a primitive wooden capstan.

Every week at the Zoo in Batavia, Java, British soldiers give a party for Dutch children from refugee camps. Here the hippo seems to be asking to join in the fun.

Footwork in Formosa

These girls of the Island of Formosa are working a primitive pump to turn water from an irrigation ditch over the family's rice fields.

A PRICKLY HARVEST

This Chinese woman is helping to gather the pineapple crop on a plantation in Malaya. Before the war 90 per cent of the canned pineapple sold in Britain came from Malaya, and the country is trying to build up this trade again.
